ABOUT THE PROGRAM

Like recent hurricanes, cyber-attacks continue to wreak havoc across the country, leaving companies and consumers crippled in their wakes. A major credit-reporting bureau suffered a breach exposing the personal information of potentially half the U.S. population at a time when states are revising their data-breach notification statutes. Several law firms found their operations crippled by worldwide ransomware attacks, while others struggled with unscrupulous employees, as the ABA and others issued guidance for protecting confidential information. A major financial institution inadvertently produced e-discovery containing non-responsive PII on thousands of its customers without the benefit of a protective order or confidentiality agreement, and the Court of Chancery issued substantive guidance on e-discovery practice and spoliation. Come hear about the latest e-discovery and data security issues that keep Delaware lawyers awake at night and what they're doing about it.
